CENTOPASSI

Centopassi

Centopassi is the winemaking entity of Libera Terra cooperatives that cultivate land confiscated from the mafia in Sicily.

The vineyards are distributed in the Alto Belice Corleonese, an area where nature dominates, with overwhelming beauty, unmistakable horizons, and unforgettable sunsets.

The wines tell the diversity of each vineyard, of the soils that distinguish them, and of the vines that from time to time enhance their characteristics.

The wines display the characteristics of each vineyard, soil and grape variety. Here elegance prevails, freshness is everywhere, ensuring wine drinkability thanks to painstaking care for the vineyards and to wine making processes, which emphasize the maximum expression of the fruit.

The Giato project

Giato is the name of the old district that surrounded amazing Greek theatre located on the top of Mount Jato. This place overlooks Jato Valley, Belice upland and the most important core of the Centopassi vineyards.

The peak of Mount Jato is on 850 meters on the sea level. This allowed, in the ancient time, to have a highly strategic position and to supervise, from one side, the crossing point to access in Conca (Horn of Plenty) and (old name of Palermo) Phoenician-Punic emporium and, from the other side, the Belice River Valley through which it was possible to reach Selinunte, ancient Greek colony, and the Sicilian South coast. This area was inhabited ever since the beginning of the first millennia before Christ by the ancient populations that settled on the islands as the Elymians-Sican. In this place, since the 300 before Christ, the Greek village of Jaitas has blossomed and lived its most flourishing period.

Giato wines are the result of only the most representative native grapes of western Sicily and derives their name from the ancient district that surrounded the wonderful Greek theater on Monte Jato. A place that dominates the valley of the river of the same name, the Belice plateau and the most important nucleus of the Centopassi vineyards.
